The Call (and Aftermath) of the Void: Understanding Suicide Loss and Bereavement Processes Amongst Student Populaces

- Are you 18 between the ages of 18-65?
- Are you attending higher education?
 - Do you read English?
- Do you have personal experience with bereavement via suicidal loss?

If you answered yes to each of the questions listed above, you may be eligible to participate in a research study.

The purpose of this research study is to examine the relationship between suicide and grief-related distress among student populations. The study aims to investigate the sociodemographic, psychosocial, and psychopathological factors that may influence the bereavement process over time among survivors of suicide loss.

Participants will be asked to do the following:

- Take an anonymous, online survey (30 minutes)

Participation will be completely anonymous, and no personal, identifying information will be collected.

An information sheet is provided as the first page of the survey.

Saraha Morrow-Brawner, a doctoral candidate in the School of Behavioral Sciences at Liberty University, is conducting this study.

To participate, please scan the QR code and complete the study survey.
